Introduction to Village

Raj-Samadhiyala, a model village of size 6 square km, located in Rajkot district known for its reforms in various sectors. The village has 45 check dams over an area of 1,090 hectares. The village have planted 65,000 trees and constructed pipelines to supply drinking water to individual homes. It has eleven members' committee called Village Development Committee (VDC), the body that takes decisions on village welfare schemes, their management, finance and people's participation. It has the power to even overrule decisions of government officials that may be detrimental to the interests of the village. The village uses technological solutions to solve various issues for e.g. remote sensing technique and Geographic Information System (GIS) to locate subsurface dykes to store water. These are natural underground water channels, which have gone dry over time, but once injected with rain water these help in faster recharge of ground water. This village inherits a visionary leader, a village institution to take decisions and community participation in resource management. Village sarpanch is selected by the people and not elected. It is the Gujarat's first Nirmal gram. Village is fully wi-fi enabled and CCTV covered.

Visit to shops, houses and a local court

Shops we visited were kept clean and they used novel mechanism of tagging each item with customers name on it. So to detect if anyone litters the wrapper on street and can be fined for the same.

We also visited a house who was BPL family and has recently become financially capable. It was very encouraging to hear how the village people helped the family and made them financially independent and self-dependent.

We also saw place where committee ran local court for solving the problems of people. Village has made a rule to first try solving the problem in village itself before going to legal system courts and police station.

No political parties are allowed in village for propagating for the election votes. No free medical camps are allowed in the village as all of the villagers are capable of their own health expenses.

Water harvesting

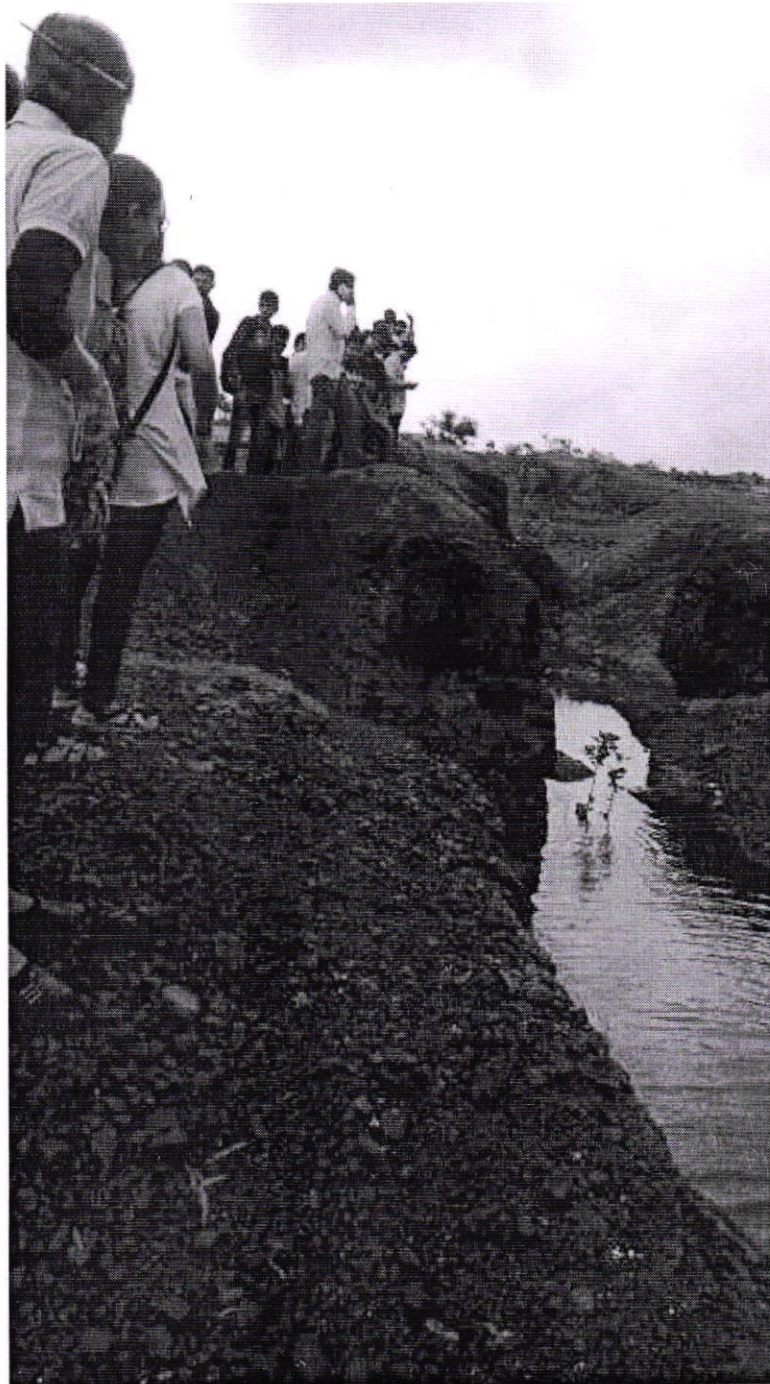

Village has won several awards for its exemplary and innovative methods to solve water shortage problem by proper water harvesting. It has 45 check dams built surrounding it which stores water throughout the year.

Remote sensing and Geographic Informatics Systems in collaboration with ISRO are used to find the dykes and lineaments which are used to find appropriate place to build the water body for longer storage. Also concept of water flow through sippages in the earth is used rather than full stream flow of water. All the check dams are interconnected through dykes which enables the optimum movement of water through underground and maintain water level in all the dams.
